ABSTRACT

This guide is designed to help state leaders identify which comprehensive school-reform models have been adopted throughout the United States. It provides information on states being targeted by developers and the capacity of each design team. The guide is divided into 4 sections: Developers in States; Developers' Capacity; List of Developers; and Comprehensive School Reform Demonstration (CSRD) Program Resources and Publications. The section on Developers in States features an alphabetical listing of each state and lists current developers in each state, the names of developers expanding in 1998-99, and the names of developers projecting expansion or expanding in 1999-2000. The section on developers' capacity lists the developer name, the current number of schools in which the developer is, the additional schools targeted for 1998-2000, and whether the developer will work with individual schools and with clusters of schools. The guidebook profiles 26 models in all. Since the CSRD program provides $150 million for the scale up of schoolwide reform nationwide, it is hoped that this approach will address each school's curriculum and instructional needs; provide enriched professional development for teachers; strengthen parental involvement; improve school management; and help with school operations. The Education Commission of the States is a nonprofit, nationwide interstate compact formed in 1965 to help governors, state legislators, state education officials and others develop policies to improve the quality of education. The ECS office is located in Denver, Colorado.

It is ECS policy to take affirmative action to prevent discrimination in its policies, programs and employment practices.

This easy-to-read reference guide is designed to help state leaders:

- Identify which comprehensive school reform models have been adopted to date in each state
- Learn which states developers are targeting for the 1998-99 and 1999-2000 school years
- See the number of schools that design teams have the capacity to work with from now until the year 2000.

This guide also provides information for state leaders to contact developers directly, as well as a list of additional resources on comprehensive school reform.

To learn more about the 26 models* profiled in this guide, please see A Catalog of School Reform Models published by the Northwest Regional Educational Laboratory, with assistance from the Education Commission of the States.

The Comprehensive School Reform Demonstration Program (CSRD) provides $150 million for the scale up of schoolwide reform nationwide. This approach addresses each school's curriculum and instruction; provides enriched professional development for teachers; strengthens parental involvement; improves school management; and tackles other aspects of a school's operation. Under the federal program, individual schools that are eligible for funding receive no less than $50,000 each. States must apply to the U.S. Department of Education for funding.

ECS will update the information in this reference guide on our Web site at www.ecs.org. For additional information on CSRD or copies of this guide (AN-98-5) and other publications, please contact ECS at 303-299-3692 or view the ECS Web site. ECS grants permission to reproduce and distribute this material for nonprofit purposes with copyright visible.

*Two models created by the same developer (Success for All and Roots & Wings) are listed together.

NOTES:

These developers will respond to interested schools/districts in ALL states:
Community for Learning, Core Knowledge, Direct Instruction, High Schools That Work, League of Professional Schools (prefers to work in the Southeast), Montessori, National Paideia Center, Success for All/Roots & Wings (strongest in east, south, southwest and west), Talent Development High School with Career Academies

These developers have specific requirements:

Developers are especially interested in expanding in areas near their existing schools and/or districts:
Accelerated Schools Project, Foxfire, High/Scope, Onward to Excellence, School Development Program.

Developer will work in states with strong charter laws, primarily in the midwest and west:
Community Learning Centers.

Developer will focus on large urban districts in western states:
Urban Learning Centers.

*Cluster - a group of geographically close schools that band together for service by school reform developers. This may occur within a district or across district boundaries.

 Pathway - a group of schools within a district that feed into one another, following the pathway from elementary school, to middle school, to high school.

Foxfire works with individual teachers, rather than schools. Please contact them directly for more information (see list of developers).
